

2011 Quarter Quality Recognition Awards

First Quarter Quality Recognition Award

Awarded the First Quarter Quality Recognition Award of 2011, Denver Transit Construction Group's Boulder Crew has consistently provided quality work on various drop structures along the West Rail Line, including work on the Harlan Channel and the drop structure between Decatur and Federal. Their recognition was determined not only by their quality of work, but by their effective communication, coordination efforts, and ability to minimize issues and concerns as they occurred. Additionally, the Boulder Crew was recognized for maintaining a high work ethic through challenging conditions and transitions. The crew has done a remarkable job contributing to the overall success of the West Rail Line.

Second Quarter Quality Recognition Award

Through solid teamwork efforts, and demonstrating a high level of quality work, it's no surprise that Denver Transit Construction Group's Overhead Catenary Systems Crew won the Second Quarter Quality Recognition Award. The OCS Crew has set the bar for leadership and teamwork skills by continually creating and sharing innovative ideas. Having poured over two thirds of the OCS foundations on the West Rail and installed over 150 light pole and sign bases, the crew is productive and has refined strategies that are of the upmost quality and have little to no safety incidents throughout the project. The OCS crew is an all-around role model of how crew members should work together.

Third Quarter Quality Recognition Award

As there were no nominations for the third quarter, a Quarter Quality Recognition Award was not given.

Fourth Quarter Quality Recognition Award

Their dedication to the philosophy of safety, quality, and production not only highlights the quality of work performed, but is one of the reasons why Denver Transit Construction Group's "Rail Dawgs" track crew won the Fourth Quarter Quality Recognition Award.

The Rail Dawgs consistently strive to improve their quality of work by implementing different construction methods and procedures. Their versatility and productivity over the past quarter is an impressive accomplishment. Not only has the crew completed their assigned work, but they have lent a hand to other disciplines on numerous occasions. The Rail Dawgs' no crew member left behind mentality exemplifies leadership and teamwork—a great asset for the West Rail Line.
